MANDALA TABLE

Mandala Table

I chose the name "Mandala Table" for my furniture piece because the design reflects the symbolic beauty and intricacy of a mandala. The circular form and detailed carvings mirror the essence of a mandala, which represents unity, harmony, and balance. Just like how a mandala draws the eye inward and creates a sense of calm, this table invites stillness and mindfulness through its symmetrical patterns and thoughtful craftsmanship.

Moreover, the mandala holds deep cultural significance across many traditions, symbolizing the cosmos and the journey toward self-awareness. By incorporating this concept into my furniture design, I aimed to create not just a functional piece, but one that evokes a sense of spirituality and artistic expression. The Mandala Table stands as a bridge between aesthetic beauty and meaningful design, offering a centerpiece that resonates with both visual appeal and deeper symbolism.

Bosnia and Herzegovina has a long and complex history, including periods of Ottoman, Austro-Hungarian, and Yugoslav rule.

The Bosnian War (1992-1995) was a devastating conflict that resulted in significant loss of life and displacement.

Yes, the center table you've shown strongly resembles traditional Bosnian furniture design, specifically from the Konjic woodcarving tradition (Konjičko drvorezbarstvo), which is recognized by UNESCO as an element of intangible cultural heritage.

Key features linking it to Bosnia:

Intricate geometric carvings - typical of Bosnian Islamic and Ottoman influences.

Low, round form common in traditional Bosnian sofra (low dining tables).

Handcrafted woodwork - Bosnia, especially the town of Konjic, is famous for this style.
